Hey Jonathan,

Quick question for you --

In our meeting this week you mentioned that you guys have talked to 15 different municipalities recently regarding, I believe, RMS. We are actually working on a little internal project where we were hoping to "survey" the top 10-15 law enforcement agencies throughout the country regarding their investments in technology over the years, so we can try and paint a picture regarding the ongoing costs of technology in this field for the Sheriff and Executive Staff. Basically we are looking to talk with other LE agencies who can help us understand how they built their technology over the past decade or so, where they've succeeded and failed, how they've funded projects, etc...

We are meeting this afternoon on that project and it occurred to me that you may have some good contacts that you might be willing to pass along, given that it seems you've maybe had similar discussions with some folks recently?

Also, hopefully by next week we should have a better idea of how to get you guys some Palantir access. We've got a call on Tuesday where I hope to get the firewall questions answered so I'll shoot you an update then.

Thanks much.

It comes from this military style of management. When you get used to ordering everybody around, I think you forget that the normal rules of human psychology are still in effect. You can order everybody to use SSL, but if they don't know or care what it is, it won't work out. In other words, you can order somebody to do something, but you can't order somebody to do it well. They have to want to do it, and know how to do it.

They should have involved us with selected users at the beginning to improve the product and get buy-in, and then have us do an orientation right away at CompStat to teach it to the bigger group and get them interested.

I think this is also why the custom notifications thing was such a mess. If nobody knows what it is, how can they do it right?

Well, what RAND and NIJ said was all true, and it's probably for the best that they expose the problem. It might not fix it, but it should be said, and maybe it will make a small difference.

If the CompStat presentation actually happens, that could be a good chance to recruit interested individuals who might give input on how to improve the usefulness of the tools. This might improve buy-in. People always like something better if they had some say in it.

PS Yes, I would like to hear what you learned from the custom notifications presentation. Schuetz and Hollywood said that the CPD intervention was a mess, and it is unclear what was actually done. They have a high opinion of you and me, but a low opinion of the way we interact with the rest of the department, and the way they use the tools.

Interesting. Follow-up from our last call. We've identified a number of resources to plug into the dashboard. However, I think it's too many data sources for a reasonably clean dashboard.

If the point is to conduct investigations, I wonder if Palantir would be more appropriate. It's designed around the exploratory nature better than dashboarding. What are your thoughts?

Subject: Palantir Training -- May 20-22

Hi Everyone,

Palantir will be back in town next week Tuesday May 20 - Thursday May 22 to conduct additional training sessions. We will be offering the Intro course again for anyone who missed that last time, as well as several sessions of advanced training for those who attended last month. I am attaching here the roster of individuals who attended last month's training for your reference.

Below you will find the dates and times that training will be offered, along with info on which level of training will be conducted during each time slot. Just as last time, you will need to register anyone from your unit who is interested in attending training. Please email me the names of individuals along with the date/time session they wish to attend. I will need your registration via email no later than noon on Friday, May 16th, please. I will send calendar invites for the sessions out that afternoon so you and your employees have time to plan.

Sessions are as follows:

Tuesday, May 20, 9:00 AM - 12:00 PM -- Intro (no previous experience required)
Tuesday, May 20, 1:00 PM - 4:00 PM -- Intro (no previous experience required)

Wednesday, May 21, 2:00 PM - 5:00 PM -- Advanced (previous 101 training required)

Thursday, May 22, 8:00 AM - 11:00 AM -- Advanced (previous 101 training required)
Thursday, May 22, 12:30 PM - 3:30 PM -- Advanced (previous 101 training required)

The Advanced training session will build upon the Intro, and will cover exporting profiles, timeline, team collaboration, creating and using filters, importing documents, and map analysis.

Classes will be held at South Campus, Building 5, Basement Training Room. Each session can accommodate up to 22 individuals. If there is an overwhelming demand for additional 101 Intro classes, we will do our best to add in an additional session to accommodate.

Please let me know if you have any questions. I can be reached at 312-590-0849.

Thanks much,

BB

Yes.. looked at it, City is buying it for non-law enforcement stuff and we had a few demos. Trying to get out to NYPD to see it in the next month or two. I'd be interested to hear your feedback about it, and also your experience with other analytics tools (we're looking at Geofeedia, Pathar, Vigilant, and a few others).

Too bad you can't make it to Monterey!

Hope all is well otherwise... usual craziness here!

Take care,

Very interesting. We are looking hard at Palantir. Any experience with the system? I believe Tiffany spoke to a colleague at Cook County. Unfortunately, I won't be able to make the trip to Monterey this year. Maybe next year.

Essentially it's a model that looks at criminal social networks and connections from a primary subject to their co-arrestees (up to two levels of association) to predict future parties to violence-- the model tests its predictions with actual outcomes so it can be refined to become more accurate.

Happy to discuss when you're free-- are you going to the conference at NPS? Mike Mealer, Josh Dennis and Marty Ryczek (prior cohort) and I are going...

So, if you can share, what is the system or "system of systems"? We are hoping to introduce, by way of technology, a "predictive" element to our intelligence led tactical analysis tool (ILTAT) project concept. And, I have not forgotten about you. I was out of the office last week. Busy putting out fires this week. I passed your note to Tiffany and was going to follow her lead. I will circle back with her. Thanks Jonathan.

Bob-

Thanks for lunch the other week. We briefly discussed Palantir-- is there someone I could talk to about how you're using it, what data sources, how much it cost, what you think of it? I'd love to get a test account to try it out, as well-- if that'd be possible.

My turn next, let me know when you're free for lunch-- I'm out most of next week in Houston but free the following week.

Thanks!

Keep in mind that there are 100's of companies that have the exact same approach to social media. Even Palantir's social media solution, torch, is using the same approach.

Also, nobody has the fully automated social network analysis capability they we have. Everyone need to manually connect one node (person) at a time.

We can discuss this and more on Thursday or even tomorrow.
